Ben Nevis 10 Years (2014/2024) - James Eadie

The Ben Nevis Distillery has long been a hot tip among connoisseurs when it comes to Highland whiskies with a strong character. With the Ben Nevis 10 years 2014/2024, independent bottler James Eadie presents us with a real sherry bomb - at 58.9% ABV. A whisky that not only impresses with its strength, but also offers subtle nuances. Will it deliver what the key figures promise?

TASTING NOTES

NOSE

The first impression? A sultana explosion straight to the face - like opening a bag of Christmas cheer! Caramel and soft oak emphasise this sweet and spicy base, while earthier notes of tobacco and brown sugar tickle the nose. If you sniff closely, you will even detect a hint of peanuts, which gives the fragrance a nutty depth.

PALATE

The whisky is viscous, almost syrupy on the tongue - a mouthfeel that triggers feelings of pure luxury. Malty notes dominate at the beginning before a symphony of sultanas, dates and candied apple unfolds. A touch of caramel provides a pleasant sweetness, while the nutty peanut flavour provides a contrast. Anyone who enjoys rich, full-bodied whiskies could go into raptures here.

FINISH

Medium length with roasted almonds and cloves. Candied fruit adds a spicy twist, and there is a sudden flash of tropical freshness from mango and papaya.

THOUGHTS

MARCEL

This Ben Nevis really packs a punch – the sherry explosion and the full cask strength make it a genuine experience for connoisseurs who enjoy intensity and character. A whisky that's a lot of fun and truly comes alive when paired with dark chocolate or fruitcake. Highly recommended for anyone looking for a robust, lively Highland dram!

SASCHA

The Ben Nevis 10 Year 2014/2024 presents itself as a well-balanced sherry expression with impressive depth and structure. The combination of sweet and spicy notes, carried by the cask strength, delivers a harmonious mouthfeel and a complex finish. A technically convincing Highland whisky with a clear cask signature and a solid finish.
