Paul John Oloroso Select Cask

Indian Whisky - Amrut probably comes to mind most. But the distillery John Paul should also be on your mind. Although they have only been distilling there since 1992, which is rather young compared to most Scottish distilleries, the Whiskys are still worth a look. The Select Cask Whisky series is composed of selected casks, in this case Oloroso Sherry casks. The bronze colour (tinted) in the glass is also intended to reflect this maturation.

TASTING NOTES

NOSE

We are overwhelmed by very strong and intense sherry aromas. The initial sweet impression quickly fades and a tart note of dark chocolate spreads. A little caramel and blood orange resonate in the background.

PALATE

Straightforward, the probably relatively young malt comes along with a biting alcohol suit. Softer and sweeter aromas are released shortly afterwards. We think of chocolate (no whole milk!) and red berries. A little oak appears now and then.

FINISH

The sherry bomb stays for a very, very long time. The chocolate stays, caramel also. A little coffee is added.

THOUGHTS

MARCEL

This Paul John Oloroso Select Cask is a true experience for anyone who loves bold sherry explosions – not overly sweet, but packed with character and a long finish that warms the senses. There's hardly room for another dram afterward, so intense is the finish. If you're in the mood for a daring Indian whisky with edges and character, this one serves you perfectly.

SASCHA

The Paul John Oloroso Select Cask impresses with its balanced structure and the successful harmony between intense sherry notes and a subtle oak presence. The 48% ABV gives it a clear bite without overpowering the enjoyment, and the long-lasting finish reveals a harmonious complexity. Overall, a very well-crafted, powerful whisky with precise cask maturation.
