Redbreast 15 Years

The Redbreast series consists of so-called single pot still whiskey. This means that both malted and unmalted barley are used in the mash. Unique in Ireland, this process gives the whiskey its rich character. Fun Fact: If you sort the Redbreast bottles by age in ascending order, starting with the 12-years, the Redbreast looks at you first. On the label of the 15-years, the Redbreast takes off and is finally in flight on the 21-years.

TASTING NOTES

NOSE

At first, you might think it's a bourbon. We have the typical smell of solvent in our nose. A short time later, the full force of the aromas is released. Starting with caramel toffee and honey, we travel on through an orchard of apple and pear. Sweet and sour, we perceive red wine and sherry notes for the crowning finish.

PALATE

Like the nose, the taste feels like a journey, where there is always something new to discover. Toffee and vanilla give the start. Further on, we discover a light, very pleasant bitterness, as well as dark fruits and a little oak at the very end. A velvety and caramel layer hovers over everything. It is remarkable that the flavours are very delicate, i.e. not penetrating and cleanly coordinated.

FINISH

The finish is dry and spicy with baking cocoa and toasted oak.
