Teeling Rose Wine Cask (2022)

In 2015, the Teeling Distillery revived whiskey production in Dublin. With their craft distillery in the Liberties, they honor Irish tradition while bringing a modern twist. This Teeling Rosé Wine Cask is part of their innovative lineup – but what does it have to offer?

TASTING NOTES

NOSE

The first impression is typically Irish: mild and smooth with a pleasant citrus note. Then it gets more interesting – fruity, almost wine-like aromas meet a solid dose of oak. Fresh sawdust comes through, accompanied by a subtle, nutty bitterness in the background.

PALATE

The whiskey starts off smooth but carries a distinct woodiness. Earthy tones and fresh wood dominate, with oak once again playing a strong role. A particularly intriguing hint of red fruit bitterness adds depth and complexity.

FINISH

The finish is medium-long and surprisingly spicy for an Irish whiskey. A pleasant warmth spreads, slightly sharp with a tingling sensation. Hints of wild berry jam shine through, adding a sweet and fruity touch.

THOUGHTS

MARCEL

The Teeling Rose Wine Cask brings a bold fruity note to the glass, adding plenty of character and delivering drinking pleasure with surprising accents. It's a good choice for a relaxed evening, though it lacks a bit of the wow factor for long-term enjoyment. An Irish whiskey that's fun without being overwhelming.

SASCHA

The Teeling Rose Wine Cask displays an interesting balance between fruity freshness and a distinctive wood note that gives it structure. Despite the intriguing aromas, the complexity remains rather moderate, making it a solid but not outstanding representative of Irish whiskeys. Definitely recommended for fans of well-crafted, artisanal bottlings.
